Waves in the Ocean - FCIT

The wave height depends on the energy transferred to the surface by the wind; it does not depend on C , λ , or T . As you probably have seen in the ocean or a lake, the stronger the wind, the higher the waves. The period and wavelength can be expressed in terms of their reciprocals, the wave frequency $\omega = 2(\pi)/T$, and the wave number $\kappa = 2(\pi)/\lambda$.
